Welcoming Our Neighbors

The St. John's vestry reached consensus at its March meeting to add a new welcome message to the church website and to place welcome signs outside the church. The message on the website will state:

We welcome children of God of all races and nations who are young and old, gay and straight, believing and doubting. You have a home with us.

The signs will say (in English, Arabic, and Spanish):

No matter where you are from, we're glad you're our neighbor.

To share any thoughts on the new welcome messages, please contact Rev. Ann Barker at 703-671-6834 (email: rector@stjohnsarlingtonva.org).

From the Rector: Resurrection Possibilities

It is the Easter season. The time when we celebrate Jesus's resurrection from the dead. The time when we celebrate God's victory over sin and death. The time when we take joy in our hope for eternal life. The time when we feel wonder at God's great love for us, expressed in such a marvelous way. Brother James Koester of the Society of St. John the Evangelist (SSJE) says, "Wherever in your life is victory; there is resurrection. Wherever in your life is joy; there is resurrection. Wherever in your life is wonder, there is resurrection." Resurrection power is critical to how we lead our lives. Wherever we experience resurrection, Koester says, "Christ is calling us to follow him out of death into his larger and more glorious life."

There are resurrection moments in all our lives, from small things to great happenings. A victory I experience in my life is any time I am able to make a computer program or a social media site do something I want it to do. I find myself shouting "I did it!" and it gives me the willingness to try it again the next time. Any time we work very hard to accomplish a goal we can be victorious. The time when you worked weeks and weeks on a project, spending late nights and long weekends, and you got it done and garnered accolades for it. The time when you buckled down to kick a bad habit that was hindering your health or your growth. The day you went outside and saw that unbelievably, finally, after a long cold winter, the flowers you planted in the fall were beginning to come up. And the time when you looked up from a clean room with satisfaction knowing you were one step closer to your goal of cleaning out the house.

There are many joys in my life. Two big ones for me are spending time with my family and friends and singing. My chorus is back in session, and I am planning my summer trip to see my sister and her family, Evan and Kristy, and my best friend in Atlanta. All of us have joys. We experience gratitude in finding that a relationship we thought might be broken because our friend hadn't communicated in a while is just fine, only subject to a busy schedule. The accomplishments of our children can bring great joy—not just the things they do, but also who they are becoming. Kindness and understanding, dealing with challenges, building relationships, and learning from experiences are all qualities that delight us when we see them flowering in our children. Our pets bring us joy, friendship, and love. Sometimes we are just overwhelmed at the joy of being alive.

Wonder is a gift from God. Wonder hits us when we see a sunset or walk along a beach or hike in the mountains and see the beauty of God's creation. We gaze in wonder at the face of a newborn baby. We are awed by the power of God when we see things fall into place that we could never in a million years have made happen. And we hear in wonder about people who give their lives for others or find a way to give back to the community that makes a tremendous difference or overcome enormous odds to do something they want to do.

Victory, joy, and wonder. They make us feel good. They give us hope for the future. These positive feelings open us to new growth, to the new life the resurrection brings us. God wants that for us so much. God wants for us to be in loving, trusting relationship with God because God wants to give us all good things. God wants for us to care about God's creation, to care about one another.

God also wants us to take action, to follow Jesus into a larger life. God is depending on us to take action. Brother Curtis Almquist of SSJE says this: "Believe that Jesus is alive and at work within you and through you. It's true.

Make the miracles normal. We are the answer to Jesus’s prayer.” In the power of the resurrection, we are called to be the miracle makers. We are called to take the wonderful blessings we have been given and represent God in the world. Every time we contribute to the Arlington Food Assistance Center or bag groceries, we are making miracles for hungry people. School children are so pleased by the new school supplies we contribute. We make miracles when we listen to a friend, pray for an enemy, follow God into an unknown future. The resurrection well deep inside us is longing to quench the thirst of God’s beloved but broken world.

The power of Jesus’s resurrection was not just a one-time event. That power lives in all of us. This season, may we let it out to bless the world.

Join the Inquirer’s Class

Who am I as a Christian? Who are we as a Church? Discuss these questions and more as part of the new Inquirer’s Class. The class will be held April 8 through May 20 from 11:30 a.m. to 12:20 p.m. in the undercroft. It will offer participants an opportunity to discuss how stories in their lives relate to the lectionary readings from the worship service or the sermon. “You may have a story to share or a question to ask about how one of the Sunday scripture readings relates to what we believe as a Church or what you struggle with or take joy in as a Christian. You may also have insight or a question about how to live out one of the Sunday readings in your life,” said Rev. Ann Barker. The class will be a joint exploration and discovery, not an occasion where Rev. Barker or Seminarian Kendrah McDonald teach about the Sunday readings. Come join the discussion!

Words on Hymns: Welcome, Happy Morning

Our traditional processional hymn for Easter Sunday is Welcome, Happy Morning. This is another hymn whose text dates back many hundreds of years, to Venantius Honorius Clementianus Fortunatus (c.530–c.600). Born at Ceneda, near Treviso, at an early age he was converted to Christianity at Aquileia. While a student at Ravenna, he became almost blind and then recovered his sight, he believed miraculously, by anointing his eyes with some oil taken from a lamp that burned before the altar of St. Martin of Tours in a church in that town. His recovery induced him to make a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Martin at Tours in 565, resulting in him spending the rest of his life in Gaul.

In his time, Fortunatus filled a great social desire for Latin poetry. He was one of the most prominent poets of the age and had many contracts and commissions with kings, bishops, and members of the nobility from the time he arrived in Gaul until his death. He used his poetry to advance in society, to promote political ideas he supported (usually conceived of by Queen Radegunde of the Franks or Gregory of Tours), and to pass on personal thoughts and communications. He was a master wordsmith and because of his promotion of the church, as well as the Roman tendencies of the Frankish royalty, he remained in favor with most of his acquaintances throughout his lifetime. He was named a saint after his death but was never formally canonized. The text for Welcome, Happy Morning is entitled Fortunatus.

John Ellerton (1826–1893) was the translator of the hymn. He served as a rector at various churches in England and is best known as a hymnologist, editor, hymn writer, and translator. He published Hymns for Schools and Bible Classes in 1859. He also co-edited Church Hymns (1871) and wrote Notes and Illustrations of Church Hymns (1881). Ellerton wrote or translated more than 85 hymns. These include Savior, Again to Thy Dear Name We Raise, whose tune bears his name.

The music for Welcome, Happy Morning was written by Arthur Sullivan (1842–1900). We tend to think of him as a composer of 14 rousing operettas set by W.S. Gilbert, but he also wrote 10 other operas, 11 full orchestral works, 10 choral works and oratorios, two ballets, one song cycle, incidental music to several plays, more than 70 hymns and anthems, and more than 80 songs and parlor ballads. His hymns and songs include Onward, Christian Soldiers and The Lost Chord.

The son of a military bandmaster, Sullivan composed his first anthem at the age of eight and was later a soloist in the boys choir of the Chapel Royal. In 1856, at age 14, he was awarded the first Mendelssohn Scholarship by the Royal Academy of Music, which allowed him to study at the academy and then at the Leipzig Conservatoire in Germany. His graduation piece, incidental music to William Shakespeare's The Tempest in 1861, was received with acclaim on its first performance in London. To supplement the income from his concert works, he wrote hymns, parlor ballads, and other light pieces and worked as a church organist and music teacher.

In 1875, Richard D'Oyly Carte engaged Gilbert and Sullivan to create a one-act piece, Trial by Jury. Its box office success led to the pair collaborating on 12 full-length comic operas. After the extraordinary success of H.M.S. Pinafore (1878) and The Pirates of Penzance (1879), Carte used his profits from the partnership to build the Savoy Theatre in 1881. Gilbert and Sullivan's joint works became known as the Savoy operas. Gilbert broke from Sullivan and Carte in 1890, after a quarrel over expenses at the Savoy. They later reunited for two more operas, but these did not achieve the popularity of their earlier works.

Sullivan's music is represented by six hymns in our 1982 Hymnal: the alternate tune of It Came Upon the Midnight Clear; Welcome, Happy Morning; Alleluia, Alleluia! Hearts and Voices Heavenward Raise; Come, Ye Faithful, Raise the Strain of Triumphant Gladness; Praise God for John, Evangelist; and Onward, Christian Soldiers. Sullivan was knighted by Queen Victoria in 1883. When he died of heart failure at the age of 58, he was regarded as Britain's foremost composer. His comic opera style served as a model for generations of musical theater composers that followed, and his music is still frequently performed, recorded, and imitated.
